

As the Coronavirus Pandemic Rages Across the Country, Where Are Republicans?

Click here to watch the video.

While Republicans ignore the coronavirus crisis, the COVID-19 pandemic is raging across the country:

- Over 250,000 Americans have died, and over 11 million Americans have been infected.
- The nation is averaging over 100,000 cases and more than 1,000 deaths per day.
- Hospitalizations continue to increase with a record 73,000 people in the hospital.
- Over 20 million Americans are unemployed. Meanwhile, the 12 million Americans who are receiving assistance from the Pandemic Unemployment Assistance program or the Pandemic Emergency Unemployment Compensation program are set to lose their emergency assistance next month.
- One in five small business have shuttered their doors and millions more will close without action.
- States are hemorrhaging funds and struggling to keep our teachers, firefighters, police officers, first responders, and other essential workers on the payroll while also downsizing or eliminating programs that Americans rely on. Local leaders are crying out for help. Mayor of Pittsburgh Bill Peduto recently stated, “The number one priority has to be the approval of a stimulus package for our cities... You can’t allow the centers of our nation’s domestic productivity to be in financial straits or facing bankruptcy.” Axios, [11/19/20]
- Over 8 in 10 parents are estimated to have children learning remotely because of the pandemic.
- Millions of workers are at risk because the Occupational Safety and Health Administration under the Trump Presidency has failed to enforce workplace safety rules that would help keep frontline workers safe from getting COVID-19 on the job.
- Eight million Americans have plunged into poverty since critical funding for the CARES Act expired over the summer.
- Millions of renters and families are at risk of eviction by January, exacerbating an already serious eviction crisis.
- Child care services, which offer much-needed support to parents and children, are at risk of severe financial hardship.

It’s clear this crisis is only worsening and relief is urgently need. Democrats stand ready to deliver that aid. House Democrats have acted not once, but twice.

In May, House Democrats passed the Heroes Act, providing over $3 trillion in coronavirus relief to:

- State and local governments to keep first responders, health workers, teachers, and other essential workers on the job;
- Testing, tracing, and treatment;
- Direct payments to ensure families can make ends meet;

Office of the Majority Leader Steny H. Hoyer, 11/20/20

- Additional assistance to help keep employees on the payroll;
- Emergency unemployment assistance;
- Protections for workers;
- Housing and nutrition assistance, among other provisions.

Nearly six months went by, and Senate Republicans willfully chose not to act. Mitch McConnell went as far as saying let the states go bankrupt. This crisis grew worse, and Republicans sat on their hands:

“I would certainly be in favor of allowing states to use the bankruptcy route. It saves some cities. And there’s no good reason for it not to be available. My guess is their first choice would be for the federal government to borrow money from future generations to send it down to them now so they don’t have to do that. That’s not something I’m going to be in favor of.” – Mitch McConnell CBS News, [04/23/20]

In October, House Democrats passed an updated Heroes Act, a compromise measure that still providing the relief that families desperately need.

But where are Republicans? Still not at the table.

“I think there are 15-20 of my guys that are not going to vote for anything. ... It's a statement of the obvious that we will not have everybody on our side...” - Mitch McConnell, The Hill, [07/21/20]

“Senate Majority Whip John Thune, R-S.D., said Monday that it would ‘be hard’ to find just 13 members of his party to go along with a potential deal struck by Pelosi and Mnuchin — even with the president's backing.” NBC News, [10/20/20]

“‘I think it’s very unlikely that a number of that level would make it through the Senate, and I don’t support something of that level,’ Senator Mitt Romney told reporters. ‘Something far more targeted to the people who really need help, I’d like to see done, and I’d like to see done as quick as possible.’” Reuters, [10/20/20]

Senator McConnell is moving away from compromise by lowering his proposal from \$1 trillion to \$500 billion.

President Trump is “bunkered in the White House,” tweeting conspiracy theories about the election and ignoring the crisis.

And House Republicans are enabling this dysfunction and chaos.

Economists, experts, and the American people are calling for additional assistance:

The Economic Strategy group released a bipartisan statement urging Congress to pass a bill to address the coronavirus crisis, saying: “Amidst a resurgence in COVID-19 caseloads and continuing economic devastation from the pandemic, we urge Congress to enact legislation that focuses on the core measures necessary to provide additional fiscal relief as quickly as possible and no later than the end of this calendar year... the pandemic resurges throughout the country. Our nation’s leaders should act on another round of fiscal relief now. At the same time, the administration should act aggressively to deploy the unspent resources it already has to combat the virus and support businesses. Our country and economy cannot wait until 2021.”

Chairman Jerome Powell continues to sound the alarm on the need for urgent relief, saying that “Too little support would lead to a weak recovery, creating unnecessary hardship for households and businesses. Over time, household insolvencies and business bankruptcies would rise, harming the productive capacity of the economy and holding back wage growth. By contrast, the risks of overdoing it seem, for now, to be smaller. Even if policy actions ultimately prove to be greater than needed, they will not go to waste.” Washington Post, [10/6/20]

Office of the Majority Leader Steny H. Hoyer, 11/20/20

Seventy-four percent of Americans want Congress to approve a $2 trillion coronavirus relief package.

House Democrats have acted. It’s time for Senate Republicans to pass the updated Heroes Act or negotiate in good faith to reach an agreement. There is only one party refusing to compromise and reach a deal: the GOP.